The OL Program was transferred from the Department of Motor Vehicles to the Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) in 1980.

General Requirements

1. Who can become a licensed dealer and/or salesperson?

To qualify to become a licensed dealer or salesperson you must meet certain requirements established by California Laws and Regulations to determine a applicant’s character, honesty, integrity, and reputation. Reference Health & Safety Code (HSC) sections 18050 and 18050.5.

Any person acting in the capacity of a dealer must be licensed with HCD. A dealer’s license is required for a person who is engaged in any of the following activities: For commission, money, or other thing of value, sells, exchanges, leases, buys, offers for sale, or negotiates or attempts to negotiate a sale, or exchange of an interest in MH/CM, or induces or attempts to induce any person to buy or exchange an interest in a MH/CM, and who receives or expects to receive a commission, money, brokerage fee, profit, management fee, or any other thing of value from either the seller or purchaser of the MH/CM. Reference: HSC 18002.6 (a).

Any person acting in the capacity of a salesperson must be licensed with HCD. Same as the activities for a dealer above. This includes a person that supervises salespersons, such as a general manager, assistant general manager, sales manager, etc. Reference: HSC 18013 (a).

Any manufacturer that: (1) sells MH or CM products in California directly to a consumer, or (2) uses salespersons to solicit business in California, must either obtain a Dealer’s license or sell its product using an existing HCD licensed dealer.

3. Who is exempt from dealer licensing requirements?

Common exceptions to licensing requirements for dealers include: banks that repossess a MH /CM, then sell it; licensed salespersons working as an employee of a licensed dealer; Mobilehome Parks that acquire MH’s via a warehousemen’s lien; persons holding a valid real estate broker’s license issued by the California Department of Real Estate (DRE) that sells only used MH’s/CM’s that have been previously registered with HCD or that have been installed on a foundation system. Another common exception is for sales executed completely outside of California and with no sales presence within California borders. Reference HSC 18002.6 (b) and Business & Professions Code 10131.6.

4. Who is exempt from salesperson licensing requirements?

Common exceptions to licensing requirements for salespersons include a representative of a bank selling a repossessed MH/CM as part of their official duty or court order; licensed manufacturers for specific types of sales, such as selling to a licensed dealer; a person not in the business of buying or selling MH’s/CM’s; selling a MH acquired for their own personal use; a licensed dealer; a licensed DRE salesperson selling a used MH. Reference HSC sections 18013(b) and 18062.8(p).

5. Do I have to reside in California to obtain a dealer / salesperson license?

No. However, a dealer must have a physical place of business (POB) in California. Reference HSC 18045.5(b).

Preliminary (PE) and Continuing (CE) Education Requirements

6. What are the PE/CE education requirements for obtaining a dealer/salesperson license?

An applicant for a MH dealer or salesperson license must have successfully completed a HCD approved six (6) hour PE course within six (6) months of taking a MH examination. Each person listed on the application as a participating person, basically the holder of the HCD OL license for a business in the dealership ownership, must meet the requirements of HSC 18050.7.

MH salespersons with a current and valid license do not need to take the six (6) hour PE course if applying for a MH dealer license. The same applies to an MH dealer wanting to get a separate salespersons license to work for another dealer. Reference: California Code of Regulations, Title 25 (T25) section 5302.

The PE/CE education requirement is not required to obtain a CM dealer or salesperson license. Reference: HSC 18053.5, T25 section 5022.

Important Note:

If more than (6) six months lapses before taking the MH examination, the PE course must be taken again. Reference: HSC 18053.5, T25 sections 5020 (f)(11), 5020 (g)(6), 5022, and 5302.

7. What is the purpose of Preliminary Education?

To improve consumer protection, preliminary and continuing education requirements were mandated by law to ensure MH dealers and MH salespersons are aware of the legal responsibilities and liabilities associated with their licenses.

8. Why is preliminary education not required for CM dealers/salespersons?

Generally, CM buyers are businesses or government agencies and are better equipped to protect their interests than the average consumer. Reference: HSC 18056.
Taking the Exam

9. How much time is allotted to take the exam?

The MH and CM dealer examinations each contain 75 multiple choice questions with a two-hour (120 minutes) time limit.

The MH and CM salesperson examinations each contain 50 multiple choice questions with a one and one-half hour (90 minutes) time limit.

Examinations conducted are all offered in pencil and paper format. The examinations are given in a multiple-choice format. Answers are typically selected from four choices.

What is a Mobilehome?
The term “mobilehome” was originally used to describe structures constructed in factories containing one and not more than two dwelling units. In 1982, the definition of “mobilehome” changed to “manufactured home” to identify structures containing only one dwelling unit. However, the term “mobilehome” was amended further to remove the two dwelling unit provision, and the term “multifamily manufactured home” (formally known as “multi-unit manufactured housing”) was added to address structures containing more than one dwelling unit. In 2008 the term was further amended to specify structures built under state standards prior to June 15, 1976.
What is a Manufactured Home?
“Manufactured Homes” are single-family dwellings manufactured in a factory to preemptive federal construction standards. Available designs range from low priced single section homes known as “singlewides,” to upscale homes manufactured in several sections, and even multi-story homes. Shown at the right is a model designed for placement on a foundation with the garage constructed after the installation of the three-section home.

Note: A “Park Trailer” model is not a manufactured home, it is a recreational vehicle and excluding loft areas may have up to 400 square feet of gross floor area.

What is a Multifamily Manufactured Home?
Formally known as “multi-unit manufactured housing”, a “multifamily manufactured home” is a structure manufactured in one or more transportable sections to form two or more dwelling units into a single structure when installed. Multifamily manufactured homes may be used as a duplex, a dormitory, a hotel, efficiency units, or apartments, installed on a support system or foundation system. Depending on the situation, it may be required to comply with state and/or federal accessibility requirements.

What is a Commercial Modular?
“Commercial Modular,” formerly known as “Commercial Coach” until January 1, 2003, is one of the most diverse types of nonresidential transportable structures manufactured in a factory. They are manufactured in single or multiple transportable sections, have many varied configurations and uses, and may be multi-storied units. They are designed and equipped for human occupancy for industrial, professional, or commercial uses. These structures can be a corner convenience store, an architect’s office, a factory, a school classroom(s), etc. A permit is required to transport these units.

What is a Special Purpose Commercial Modular?
A “Special Purpose Commercial Modular,” formerly known as a “Special Purpose Commercial Coach” until January 1, 2003*, is not a structure. They are vehicles, with or without motive power, designed and equipped for human occupancy for industrial, professional, or commercial purposes. These vehicles are not required to be moved under permit, but they must be registered and licensed by the California Department of Motor Vehicles for movement on public roads. The mobile food preparation unit at the left is an example of a Special Purpose Commercial Modular. In most instances, the local health department or the California Department of Health Services also must approve the unit in order to affix a Department insignia of approval.
Information From Industry

The following Questions and Answers were provided by MH industry representative JC Strutzel and do not necessarily reflect the position of HCD. However they may provide applicants and licensees with the perspective of a long time industry expert relating to a topic that is becoming more common in today’s economic era.

1. How do Dealers and Brokers cooperate?

   If someone licensed only as a Dealer cooperates with a Broker, the sale is subject to §18035 of the Health and Safety Code and the Dealer must control the sale. The Dealer is charged with the responsibility of controlling the transaction and making sure the sale conforms to HCD law. The Dealer is identified as the ‘Seller’ in the escrow and purchase documents. The Dealer is allowed to pay, and the Broker is allowed to receive, a 'referral fee' even though the Broker has performed a function that requires a DRE license.

2. Does that mean a Dealer/Broker cooperative sale would conform to both DRE and HCD law?

   No. The respective legal processes governing Dealers and Brokers are vastly different. The transactional differences between the two make it impossible to comply with both sets of laws at the same time. The law governing cooperative sales between a Dealer and Broker is Dealer law such as found in Division 13, Part 2, of the Health and Safety Code. Within that body of law is Section 18035 Health and Safety Code, which contains a code specified escrow law.

3. Why was HCD law chosen over DRE law as the regulatory process of choice?

   Both the California Association of Realtors (CAR) and HCD expressed opinions on this issue. Both parties agreed that such transactions should only be covered by one body of law. CAR recommended DRE law because it annually protected hundreds of thousands of real property homes. HCD said the rights of the consumer were far greater under HCD law. HCD prevailed.

4. If the buyer, seller, Dealer and Broker all agreed, could a Dealer and Broker each process their end of the deal according to HCD and DRE law respectively?

   No. As already stated, it is impossible to comply with both regulatory schemes at the same time. There are unavoidable conflicts that cannot be waived.

5. What are some of those conflicts?

   Examples of some conflicts are:

   - Dealers are in the chain of title; they guarantee title like an auto-mobile dealer (DMV dealer law was the genesis for HCD dealer law). Brokers act only as agents.
   - The rights of consumers differ significantly depending upon whether HCD law or DRE law is applied. A few examples are: under DRE law a buyer and seller can agree to liquidated damage clauses; early releases of funds from escrow; or waive the creation of an escrow. All three of these actions violate HCD law.
   - Remedies for the consumers differ depending upon which body of law governs the transaction.
   - A 'secured party' (i.e. a 'legal owner or junior lienholder) is required to deliver their original title document and a HCD 'Conditional Release of Interest' form prior to the payoff of their liens if the escrow is governed by HCD law (§18035(d) Health and Safety Code). In all other instances a secured party is not required to deliver their original title to escrow until after receiving payment in full of the unpaid balance due on their loan.

   HCD law prohibits any provision in an agreement that waives the buyer's rights. Any waiver is deemed contrary to public policy and is deemed void and unenforceable.

6. Why is a Dealer regarded as the seller when the MH unit is still owned by the registered owner and what is the significance of that fact?

   HCD has said that simultaneously to when the buyer has paid the purchase price and accepted delivery of the home, and the conditions of escrow have been met, title to the home automatically passes to the dealer for a brief instant in time, thereby enabling the dealer to have the ability to close the escrow, report the sale and guarantee title. At close of escrow the Dealer was the seller. The Dealer and purchaser mutually executed a code specified receipt for deposit (see §18035.1 Health and Safety Code), a purchase order, conditional sales contract, or other document evidencing the purchase contemporaneous with, or prior to, the receipt of any cash from the purchaser. All payments toward the purchase shall only be made payable to the escrow agent.
7. A common school of thought is that an escrow agent only accepts instructions. Assuming that is true, do escrow agents have to be concerned with making sure the escrow instructions they prepare comply with MH unit escrow law?

Yes. Several years ago Deputy Attorney General Michael Botwin answered this question when he caused an article to be published in "CEA News." The subject of the article concerned a popular escrow agent that complied with the instructions of her principals on the sale of a new MH unit. Those instructions did not comply with the mobile home escrow law (§18035 Health and Safety Commission); instead funds were released early and the buyer suffered damages. The Dealer fled. The AG filed suit against the escrow agent. The escrow agent paid the buyer's damages and went out of business. That said, probably the greatest exposure to litigation for an escrow agent derives from civil litigation initiated by consumers or lenders, not government enforcement agencies. Therefore, it may be wise to have a discussion with your attorney prior to accepting instructions that do not conform to the law.

8. For the protection of a Broker's client, wouldn't it be better if the Broker continued their involvement with the transaction until the close of escrow?

At first blush this sounds good. But the fact is that Brokers probably know no more about HCD law than Dealers know about DRE law. This supports the notion that the only fair thing to do is to excuse the Broker from any further duty once an offer is accepted. The Broker gets referral fee, which seems to imply the Broker has minimal exposure to a valid complaint.

9. What procedure should a Broker follow when an offer is about to be made involving a Dealer co-op?

You have a duty to disclose to your client that the pending offer involves a Dealer and if the offer is accepted, you will be required to excuse yourself from further participation in the progression of the transaction since the sale must be handled by the Dealer pursuant to HCD law. You may add that you will receive a referral fee.

10. Can someone who is dual-licensed as a Dealer and a Broker cooperate with another Broker pursuant to DRE law instead of HCD law?

Yes. Someone who is dual-licensed is not required to use one license or the other. The forms and actions used by the dual-licensee dictate which license is in play. Hence, it is possible that someone who is licensed as a Broker can cooperate pursuant to DRE law with someone who is dual-licensed.

The Occupational Licensing Program consists of five elements which are licensing, consumer complaint handling, preliminary and continuing education, enforcement, and the Manufactured Home Recovery Fund function.
